last, and Pink Wilekiers Blake, the Milwaukee Wilekiesbarre, Maggie Murphy, and their vagrants, numbering about 300, all of whom, the police handlers, will have to go with them. The decision was arrived at yesterday, at the meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, which a letter was received from Robert Forrester, President of the Charity Organization Society, suggesting that the proper way to deal with street beggars was to detail police to seize citizens' clothing to arrest the profession and direct the occasional beggar to the place for relief. After reading the letter town were encouraged by the lodging system of the police.

"Private citizens," he said, "had reported to the police that beggars and vagrants had molested them. On such a complaint, we arrested them. He went before a merciful Magistrate and discharged and got a meal. A few days woman on the east side was attacked by beggars and robbed. The professional beggars and vagrants should be gotten rid of."

The Commissioner moved that Chief report in full upon the advisability of detaining three or four policemen to go around

There was a little more talk on the subject and then the Chief was directed to respond on the condition of the lodging houses, the various products, and the character of the persons who lodged in them, and furnish the information he could procure. The Chief's statement was that Roosevelt encourages pauperism. It has no redeeming features.

The Board will not fix the date for the closing of the houses until the Chief makes his report. It has been pointed out that the Board of the health authorities of the city from immemorial, but every time a move was made to have them abolished there has been pro-

On the ground that they sheltered some of the "undesirables," and that as long as there was a chance of their being able to get away, they were not to be disturbed, the duty of the city to maintain the dormitory station houses. Typhus fever, small-pox, and a dozen other diseases of an infectious nature have been discovered in the lodging houses, and they have been pestiferous literally.

The need for the lodgings has grown so because the city has established a place of refuge for the poor at the foot of East Main street, where the city has a large building, but where the poor can get not only a bed, but a breakfast of bread and tea. The place is well patronized, so well that additional accommodations are to be provided in a few days.

Since the establishing of these lodging houses for the deserving poor have been organized the station houses. The closing up of the places now will not work hardship to the serving persons. It will throw on the great many professional panhandlers who are used to the few nights for the

A man who lives in New Jersey was held seven times Monday night between Times Square and the Cortlandt street ferry. Four hold-ups were between THESES office area street, and two of the four beggars were there. The fifth one was on the plaza facing Post Office, and the other two were on Cortlandt street. One of the Cortlandt street handlers told the Jerseyman to "go to town" when the appeal for aid was refused.

T. W. MORGAN DRAFER ARRESTED

the Complainant.

FLUORING, L. I., Jan. 21.—T. W. M. Draper was arraigned before Justice Connors this evening on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree. Draper was held in default of bail, which was fixed at $1,000. He was committed to a cell in the Town Hall.

The complainant is Thomas F. Peterson, who entered into a partnership in chicken raising with Mr. Draper and invested $1,200 in the business. The business was begun early last year on Mr. Draper's place at Great Neck. Mr. Peterson asked Mr. Draper a few days ago to see the books, and at that time the owner of the business, Draper, he says, realized

After some talk Peterson demanded money. Draper, he says, put off the settlement until the next day, but for several days after, Peterson says, he could not find him. Peterson says he was not in the room when Draper was arrested yesterday noon. When arraigned Draper pleaded guilty and at his request trial of the case set down for next Friday morning. He was finally aided by Harrison S. Moore and Clinton Smith as counsel.
